

ABSTRACT

A door lock system for an airplane is operative to alternately operate spaced doors to provide controllable entry into a restricted area located between the spaced doors.